Farewell to Bill Yoshino
By Christine Munteanu, JACL Chicago Member

Bill Yoshino, long-time Midwest Regional Director and most recently the interim Executive Director of JACL, has retired from the organization at the end of March. Bill has long been a reliable and important fixture in the JACL Midwest Office, having begun his tenure as JACL Midwest Regional Director in October of 1978. JACL Chicago would like to acknowledge Bill’s many valuable contributions to JACL, as well as to the broader Japanese American and Asian American community, and thank him for his nearly 40 years of service to the organization.

In the 1980s and 1990s, Bill was absolutely instrumental in JACL’s push for gaining redress for the Japanese American community. He organized grassroots letter-writing and lobbying campaigns throughout the Midwest chapters: first, to pass the legislation to establish the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians, and then to pass Civil Liberties Act of 1988.

When the commission held one of its hearings in Chicago, Bill worked to identify and prepare witnesses to testify. In the 1990s, Bill led JACL in assisting individuals in applying for and receiving their apology letters and restitution checks. He has named the successful Redress Campaign as one of his most fulfilling experiences with the organization.

In describing Bill’s contributions to the Redress campaign, John Tateishi, former National Director of JACL, captures Bill’s modesty and humility, as well as his principled dedication to the mission of JACL:

“I’ve always felt [you] never received credit for [your] part in [the redress campaign]: for the many long days and nights and weeks and months we pondered the course of the campaign together and gave our hearts and souls to ensuring we would make the American public understand the importance of what we sought. You were always the silent partner in everything I did as the JACL’s redress leader, and I’ll be forever grateful to you for all your brilliance and effort, and so too for your many moments of wise counsel in the past seven years we’ve worked together.”

Bill is also a respected leader in JACL’s efforts to combat anti-Asian sentiment through strengthened hate crime legislation and anti-defamation initiatives. Locally, he’s represented the Asian American community on the Illinois Asian American Advisory Council to the Governor, the Chicago Asian American Advisory Committee, the Chicago Commission on Human Relations, and the Illinois Commission on Discrimination and Hate Crimes.

Bill is the go-to person with JACL for statements and responses to hate incidents, and under his leadership the Midwest Office has produced numerous educational materials and programs that have impacted students, educators, and community members throughout the country.

Bill also supported and expanded JACL’s youth and leadership programs. For an organization so steeped in history and tradition, Bill’s willingness to truly trust and invest in JACL’s young people is really quite revolutionary. It is a testament to Bill’s leadership, mentorship, and guidance that JACL Chicago has such a strong cohort of young people to carry on JACL’s mission and legacy.

The Chicago Chapter has truly benefited from Bill’s presence in our office, and we will miss your knowledge and wisdom. We are grateful for Bill’s steadfast leadership in challenging times for the organization, and for all of his years of hard work. Bill’s passion and commitment to JACL and to our community has helped make the world a better and more just place.
Inaugural 2017 Recap: Celebrating Community
By Rebecca Ozaki, Youth Co-Chair

The Japanese American Citizens League Chicago Chapter hosted its annual Inaugural event on March 18, 2017 at Amron Hall in Lincolnwood. The theme of the event was “Celebrating Community” and over 100 community members gathered to eat, mingle, dance, and come together to recognize long time advocate, Bill Yoshino for his years of dedication to the Asian American and Japanese American community.

Chapter President, Bryan Hara, began the program by welcoming guests, sharing the importance of celebrating community while also highlighting our commitment as a chapter to continue to work towards equity for all in this time of uncertainty. JACL National Interim Executive Director and Chicago native, Stephanie Nitahara, swore in eighteen members to the JACL Chicago Board of Directors. New JACL Chicago board members include Lisa Sakai and Brian Ozaki.

Mari Yamagiwa, Marisa Fujinaka, and Christine Munteanu, each current and former staff of JACL, shared their special thanks to Bill Yoshino for the advancement he has made for the community and for uplifting youth in the Chicago Japanese American community. Bill Yoshino has served as the JACL Midwest Director, Executive Director, worked tirelessly on Japanese American Redress, and has been an advocate for the Asian American and Japanese American community for over 38 years. Bill thanked the community along with his wife, Carol Yoshino, while sharing his story and hope for the future. Bill’s last day at JACL was March 31.

The evening ended with line dancing from our very own, Brandon Ishikata and drawing of the Cubs vs. Brewers raffle tickets generously donated by Next Generation Nikkei member, Jeff Tademoto. Winners were Judy Tanaka and Larry Schectman. Special thanks to the Consulate General Naoki Ito, and the Deputy Council General Keiko Yanai of Japan for attending the event. Additional thanks to Amron Hall, Windy City Jams, Kamehachi, Mary Doi, and dedicated JACL Chicago volunteers for helping to make the night a success. 🎈

JACL Chicago will host an appreciation event and official retirement party for Bill Yoshino in Chicago at a later date. Stayed tuned for details.

Brian Ozaki

Brian K. Ozaki, equipment engineer with Verizon Wireless, is an active member of the Japanese American community in the Chicagoland area where he resides with his two children and wife. As a child of parents who were incarcerated in camps during WWII, Brian is committed to furthering the knowledge of what happened in the past as a means to prevent similar atrocities from happening in the future. His work across the Japanese American and Muslim communities has been a passion he’s pursued for a number of years. Brian’s decision to formally serve the JACL board came from being moved by his attendance at multiple events such as the Congressional Gold Medal ceremony, the Kansha Too program, the Minidoka pilgrimage as well as the JACL/OCA 2016 Summit. These experiences coupled with the socio-political climate continue to motivate Brian and his family to get involved and give back.

Lisa Sakai

Born in the Year of the Boar (you do the math), Lisa Sakai is a 3rd generation Japanese American (Sansei). She is President and CEO of TransAgra International Inc., a privately-held, multinational agribusiness company. Her company’s mission is dedicated to developing products that will help feed the world with minimal negative impact. Prior to joining TransAgra she worked at both Citibank (asset-based financing for middle markets) and Bank of America (commercial lending for large corporate accounts). She has a B.A. from Lake Forest College and a MBA from DePaul University. She has lived in Chicago since 1981 has been active in the Japanese American community. Lisa joined the Board of JACL Chicago in 2016 and is also a member of the U.S. Japan Council. Prior to its merger into the National JACL Credit Union, she was on the Board of the Chicago JACL Credit Union. She also served on the Board of the Japanese American Service Committee for over 10 years and was its President from 1999-2002. She has served on the National JACL Scholarship committee, the Asian Lunar New Year Committee and the JACL National Convention Committee as well as the Asian Advisory Council for the IL State Comptroller and the City of Chicago’s Council on Human Relations. Lisa subscribes to the Starfish Theory and believes individuals and communities can effect positive change in the world.

Reflections on the AACC 34th Annual Gala
By Lisa Doi, Kansha Alumni Leadership Board Member

The Asian American Coalition of Chicago brings together over 16 Asian American communities to celebrate Lunar New Year. This event, one of the rare moments that so many of Chicago’s Asian American communities come together, is a reminder of both the similarities and differences between these Asian American communities and the ways that we can move forward together. I went into the event thinking a lot about the significance of Lunar New Year; the event was held over a month after Lunar New Year by the Pakistani community, a community that doesn’t generally celebrate Lunar New Year. What does it mean for a broad coalition of Asian American groups to celebrate the traditions of a few members as a moment for community building? Instead of seeing this as a moment of disunion, it showed me the potential of our collective power.

One of the events hosts shared that as in Chicago we are one of the only cities lucky enough to have Asian American representation at the city level, county level, state level, and nationally. We also have our own community leaders, like this year’s Exemplary Community Service Awardee, Rick Morimoto. But last year, when Rick brought Norman Mineta and JANM to Northwestern, we had a conversation about losing political giants like Mr. Mineta, Spark Matsunaga, and Daniel Inouye. This may be a moment when, for our own sake, we need to align with other Asian American communities. But it is also a moment when we should recognize the power that we have as allies to ever new communities of Asian Americans.

From April 15th to 18th I was able to attend the JACL OCA leadership summit. On the plane over to Washington, D.C. I didn’t really know what to fully expect. I imagined there will be a lot of lectures showing young adults how to be successful in the professional world. However that was true to an extent, my perceptions quickly changed. This four day trip in D.C. consisted of workshops of lectures ranging from “The Civil Rights History of Asian American and Pacific Islanders” to “How To Advocate For Your Community.” The ages of the participants ranged anywhere from 21 to 64.

On Sunday, Professor Nash, who teaches at the University of Maryland, asked us to share where our families were during different periods of time. He engaged us in conversations of our family histories and how they were affected by the civil rights work of leaders before us. Later on that same day, Kahm Moua broke down the basics of lobbying in ways that helped us understand the importance of why we need to be fighting for our communities and its impact it has on people. And after much hard work of preparing with my assigned group, at the end of the trip we were able to visit a senator’s office and lobby for issues that we were passionate about.

The leadership summit was only a span of four days, but I was able encounter some amazing personalities along the way. We had one individual who worked for a non-profit in Boston that helped immigrant refugees with several different resources. Another person wrote the biography of the Japanese American baseball legend Kenichi Zenimura. We had a retired accountant, a filmographer, a paralegal, and college students. People who I may not have encountered throughout my life but was able to meet this weekend.

I am continuing to find myself as a recently graduated college student, an artist, and a mixed race person. However, this weekend reminded me of two things. One, it’s not a sprint, it’s a marathon. Work takes time and dedication. What you’re doing now doesn’t necessarily reflect the rest of your future. And two, fighting for what you’re passionate about and the communities that matter to you are essential. These people and issues are what pushes me to make great art and do what I love, and the leadership summit helped me realize that.

The Chicago Nisei Post #1183 will hold its special service at the Veterans Memorial in Montrose Cemetery at 10:30 am, just before the community service. After the observances at the cemetery, the Post will host a free luncheon at the Japanese American Service Committee.
